Get ready to play better golf.

Helping you to play better golf is the philosophy behind instruction at the Wintergreen Golf Academy. Pairing the optimum elements of video technology and biomechanics with individual golf instruction, the Golf Academy features a program that combines instruction and analysis, allowing students to learn every shot.

The staff uses experience and video to provide a personal development plan, giving the student an outline for their future success.

Whether you are a beginner, mid or low handicap golfer, Wintergreen's instructional programs and qualified golf professionals are here to help you achieve your golf goals.

MOUNTAIN GOLF

Devils Knob

“THE BEST COLLECTION OF MOUNTAIN GOLF EAST OF THE ROCKIES.”

Stoney Creek Clubhouse and Bar & Grill

Two courses. Two completely different designs. Two invigorating experiences. All in one stunning resort.

High in Virginia's Blue Ridge Mountains lies one of the nation's premier four-season golf destinations - Wintergreen Resort. Wintergreen's 11,000 acres extend from the top of the Blue Ridge Mountains to the valley below. With its mountaintop and valley locations, the resort offers two distinctly different golf experiences. Devils Knob, the highest course in Virginia at nearly 4,000 feet, is known for cool summer temperatures and outstanding conditions. Or golf year round in the valley on our nationally ranked Stoney Creek course, with 27 holes designed by world-renowned golf course architect Rees Jones. Whether you are a resort guest, a day golfer or part of a golf group, Wintergreen golf will elevate your game.

Top 25 Best Family Golf Resorts, voted by Golf Digest Publications

A classic layout by legendary golf course designer Ellis Maples, a second-generation disciple of the great Donald Ross, Devils Knob Golf Course is perched atop the Blue Ridge Mountains. At an elevation of 3,850 feet, Devils Knob is the highest golf course in Virginia, providing majestic, 50-mile views of the Shenandoah and Rockfish valleys.

Built largely on rock formations, Devils Knob features numerous natural stone outcroppings giving it a unique character. At a maximum 6,711 yards, Devils Knob is a charming experience, attractive to various levels of golfers. With increased length, Devils Knob still demands accuracy from tee to green. The course combines tight doglegs and devilishly sloped greens. Dramatic elevation drops craft a distinct flair, as well as unique challenges from start to finish.

Perennially ranked as one of Virginia's best courses and recognized nationally for superb course conditions, the altitude provides some extra carry on most golf shots, as well as a welcome escape from the summer heat, normally keeping mid-day temperatures in the 70s and 80s.

STONEY CREEK

Flowing through the fertile floor of the historic Rockfish Valley, the 27-hole Stoney Creek Golf Course basks beneath the Blue Ridge Mountains in a setting as relaxing as it is challenging. Stoney Creek's spectacular combination of three nines, each designed by world-renowned golf course architect Rees Jones, provide a year-round escape for every level of golfer, from serious competitor to vacationing beginner.

Immaculate fairways wind through a natural mountain setting with panoramic views. Traditional in design, it incorporates natural springs and native habitat, including Lake Monocan and Stoney Creek, with all three nines offering generous landing areas, few forced carries, several effective elevations changes and large, deceptively contoured greens.

The three nines are named the Monocan, Shamokin and Tuckahoe, each observing the region's Native American legacy. Jones designed each sequence of holes to be individually distinctive yet collectively cohesive, all blending into the natural surroundings that look up some 3,000 feet to the tip of the mountain range.
